Shearon Environmental Design is a family owned and operated business and our civil engineering department will be directed by Zachary Shearon. Zach is a registered Professional Engineer with experience providing quality engineering services to both public and private clients. Zach brings a fresh point of view to the design process with the goal of providing innovative design strategies with an environmental perspective.

Our pricing structure for civil engineering services is structured to be flexible in nature in order to respond to the design needs and goals of the client. Shearon Environmental Design's greater interdisciplinary coordination provides the opportunity for lower design fees and decrease approval times.

The addition of civil engineering complements Shearon's existing expertise in landscape architecture and land planning to provide our clients and fellow design professionals a single source for site development services. Because Shearon Environmental Design is a recognized leader in site design, construction, and maintenance; our design team bring a practical perspective to our design solutions. We design projects that can be built on-time, within budget, and maintained in the most efficient way possible.

At Shearon Environmental Design we are committed to understanding and exceeding the needs of our clients. The addition of civil engineering to our already extensive scope of design and construction services demonstrates that commitment. Since 1974, Shearon Environmental Design has proudly supplied top-quality landscape design/build services to a broad range of customers throughout the greater Delaware Valley. Shearon's goal is to provide a comprehensive selection of site design and construction services that are unmatched in quality, consistency, and efficiency.
